Hartford
SEMINARY

Exploring Differences, Deepening Faith

ANNE RAPKIN, a former lawyer, earned her MA in Religious Studies and works as a chaplain at Hebrew Home and Hospital in West Hartford, CT.

ROCHELLE BAYLESS wrote a master's thesis called A Theology of Food: Seeing Food as Acts of Grace. After she graduated, Rochelle used her thesis as the blueprint for Grace Café in Danville, KY, which addresses hunger and food insecurity by serving people without regard to their ability to pay.

CRAIG PHILLIPS' Master's thesis explored how Muslim thinkers from different backgrounds and professions talk and think about human rights. This same type of inquiry — understanding how people think, why they do what they do, and how to optimize their experience of the world — is what Craig does now designing digital products and services.

NISA MUHAMMAD, a graduate of the Islamic Chaplaincy Program, is a journalist and Assistant Dean for Religious Life at Howard University in Washington, D.C.

SHAWN FISHER earned a Master of Arts in Religious Studies, then went on to become the pastor at Groton Congregational Church.

DR. BEVERLY DANIEL TATUM is President Emerita of Spelman College, a nationally recognized authority on racial issues in America and a licensed clinical psychologist. While earning her MA in Religious Studies from Hartford Seminary, she developed the idea and wrote her bestselling book, “Why Are all the Black Kids Sitting Together in the Cafeteria? and Other Conversations about Race.”

DR. MAHAN MIRZA graduated with an MA focusing on Islam and Christian-Muslim relations. Since his days at Hartford Seminary, he has completed his Ph.D. in Religious Studies from Yale University, helped develop America's first accredited Muslim liberal arts college (Zaytuna College), and is currently a Professor of the Practice in the Contending Modernities program at the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies at the University of Notre Dame.
